To Whom it May Concern

Central Signs were engaged by the Trust's construction managers to produce and install replacement tiles to the Federation Pavilion in Centennial Park. The project was particularly demanding because it was the replacement of an intricate artwork, which had national significance both in itself and in its embellishment of the culturally significant Federation Pavilion.

While the project had a tight timeframe (it had to be ready by the Centenary of Federation celebrations held on 1 January 2001) and restricted budget, it was the unique and demanding nature of the project that demonstrated the capabilities of Central Signs to deliver exceptional work. The work also came under critical review from the original artist who wholeheartedly commended the final product.

Central Signs approached the project with professionalism, enthusiasm and a high level of organisational thinking.

On this basis, I would be pleased to recommend Central Signs to prospective clients.

Yours sincerely
